We were on a tour of a castle that had been abandoned long ago. On the tour, they told us some fun facts. A funny story was a little princess who was getting ready to take a bath after a formal event. The princess was upset because she had to remove her crown before she got in the water! The royal family was required to learn more than one language. Outside, we could see a little sparrow flying after a big dog. The public would laugh when they came by on tours, but it was a frequent vision at the castle. The dog always played with the little bird. There was a portrait of a mighty general hanging in one hallway that had been painted over a century ago. There was even a plow on display that had been used on the fields behind the castle! It was very interesting to learn about the castle and the people who lived there.
