

Story words

Grade 5 Vocabulary Worksheet

Complete the stories by filling in the missing words.

Squeezed	misadventure	whimsical	splattering
realized	commotion	amiable	innocence
enthusiastically	abstract	patriotic	compensate

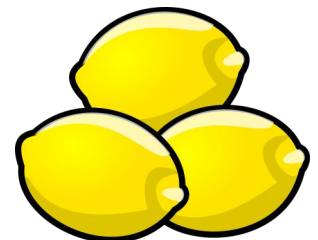

All of the kids in the neighborhood liked Mrs. Taylor. She was an _____, older lady who brought fresh _____ lemonade to them on hot summer days when they played in the park by her house.

One day, Jake, Mia and Ben decided to brighten up Mrs. Taylor's fence with a fresh coat of paint to _____ her for her kindness. Armed with brushes and cans of _____ red and white paint, they _____ set to work.

Little did they know, a _____ was about to unfold. As Mia dipped her brush into the red paint, a mischievous squirrel darted onto the fence and playfully flicked its tail, _____ paint all over Ben's face. Shocked and startled, Ben stumbled backwards and knocked over a can of white paint, which spilled across the ground and onto Mia's shoes.

Amidst the _____, a curious cat walked through the spilled paint and leapt onto the fence, leaving a line of white paw prints across the fence's red trim. The three kids burst into laughter as they _____ their painting project had transformed into a _____ disaster.

Despite the mess they had created, Mrs. Taylor couldn't help but chuckle at their _____ as the four of them stood together observing the fence adorned with splashes of red paint and a trail of white paw prints. Her fence was now an interesting piece of _____ art, and she had each of the kids sign their names at the bottom. The cat and squirrel had already signed their names.

Story words

Grade 5 Vocabulary Worksheet

Answers:

Squeezed	misadventure	whimsical	splattering
realized	commotion	amiable	innocence
enthusiastically	abstract	patriotic	compensate

All of the kids in the neighborhood liked Mrs. Taylor. She was an amiable, older lady who brought fresh squeezed lemonade to them on hot summer days when they played in the park by her house.

One day, Jake, Mia and Ben decided to brighten up Mrs. Taylor's fence with a fresh coat of paint to compensate her for her kindness. Armed with brushes and cans of patriotic red and white paint, they enthusiastically set to work.

Little did they know, a misadventure was about to unfold. As Mia dipped her brush into the red paint, a mischievous squirrel darted onto the fence and playfully flicked its tail, splattering paint all over Ben's face. Shocked and startled, Ben stumbled backwards and knocked over a can of white paint, which spilled across the ground and onto Mia's shoes.

Amidst the commotion, a curious cat walked through the spilled paint and leapt onto the fence, leaving a line of white paw prints across the fence's red trim. The three kids burst into laughter as they realized their painting project had transformed into a whimsical disaster.

Despite the mess they had created, Mrs. Taylor couldn't help but chuckle at their innocence as the four of them stood together observing the fence adorned with splashes of red paint and a trail of white paw prints. Her fence was now an interesting piece of abstract art, and she had each of the kids sign their names at the bottom. The cat and squirrel had already signed their names.

